ANNOUNCING A SPECIAL LECTURE PROGRAM

MAKING THE WORLD OF TOMORROW

ST. MARY'S UNIVERSITY

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS INSTITUTE

announcing the Special Lecture Program for the academic year 1956-57 on open to all men and women of all ages, conducted in its Downtown College (Law School), 112 College Street, in the heart of San Antonio. The lectures start at 7 p.m. Certificates of participation will be issued.

There is a higher law guiding the destinies of men, but they must strive in their own way to find the pathway leading to peace with dignity and honor. In today's world this pathway is fast becoming even more obscure. Beset with the greed and ignorance of men, the world is now burdened with the enigma of recent scientific advances which threaten a climatic end to all of man's hopes. In our quest for light and guidance it is incumbent upon us to dwell upon the possibilities open in the future.

It is the aim of this year's Institute program to explore the forces and influences which will create, or destroy, the world of tomorrow. What are the forces which will go into Making the World of Tomorrow? This program is an attempt to seek out and describe them. It is not enough that we know history; we must be aware of the impact of political movements upon our existence and the influence such forces may have on the future of peoples all over the world. Economic systems, which now divide the world, can become highways to peace and unity. The people of the world are held apart by social differences involving questions of race, caste, languages, and other barriers which are high, but not insurmountable. Can these myriads of peoples and customs be united and marshalled into a sincere and powerful movement toward world peace?

These questions, and others, have answers. We do not presume to be able to provide them all, but we can make the attempt. With the aid of the distinguished speakers listed on the following page, and with the blessing and guidance of Almighty God, we hope to enrich the minds and hearts of all within range of this program.

St. Mary's University is a fully accredited four-year institution, offering degrees in Arts, Sciences, Business Administration, Music, Education, Law, and

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

This program is based on the need for men and women trained to understand the broad aspect of foreign affairs as well as for those who wish to prepare themselves for position in the Foreign Service. The material is applicable to work in other federal departments and agencies, in international organizations, etc. It is useful to men and women seeking employment with concerns engaged in international trade, finance, transportation and communication. Teachers will find these courses extremely beneficial.

For further information concerning the International Relations Institute or other courses, call St. Mary's University, PE 3-8161, San Antonio, Texas.
