

SMEAT DAILY HAPPINESS REPORT FOR TODAY

ITEM: We have to report the temporary loss of Mr. Graves who was last seen running fungus tests (somewhere in his lab) on the ergometer saliva trap materials ---- as soon as the jammed door to his office can be opened we'll have further information. (see figure 1)

ITEM: Some apprehension is just beginning to show in personnel outside the SMEAT area today as the chamber temperature passed through 350°F. It seems thaat someone (Aggie U. student) didn't know the difference between K and F (never learned the alphabet no doubt)--- but since no complaints have been heard from the crew since the end of a short communications break no further action is planned. --- Are you still there? why don't you answer/!

ITEM: Medical data handling has been going as smooth as can be expected---- along with the Chinese ping-pong team it is rumored several thousand coolies will also be along (informed sources feel this is the only logical explanation for Henny Kissyger's recent trip to China). Some of the other help is still trying to adjust to the environment..... (see figure 2)

ITEM: Part of the crew (Krippen and Bodko) are rumored to be withering away for lack of exercise, while another of them (whose initials are T.H.O.R.N.T.O.N.) is said to be in top shape for the Olympic long distance tricycle competition, one of the other current bits of speculation is that if the trainee can wear out the tricycle simulator device (otherwiase known as the egormeter) he may be able to make it out of the chamber in time to compete.....

ITEM: MO93 data analysis is progressing beautifully----- unprompted triple-blind analysis of the data reveals that either the tapes were mixed with the Brooklyn zoo research labs or that we have one pregnant elephant, a Siamese caterpillar, and a baby jellyfish in the chamber.....
