Dear Dr. Gaume:

I am greatly interested in an article which appeared in the Los Angeles Times, Nov. 14, 1971. In it you are quoted of the benefits derived from the space travel devices and how they can help rehabilitate the injured and crippled patients.

The "inclined suspension simulator" and the "negator spring system" are of real interest to me. My sister has been bedridden several years due to strokes and it is because of her that I would like to know if these devices are manufactured to sell to the public, and if so, who is the manufacturer? Any information you can give me I would appreciate.

Very truly yours,
