November, 1981 Washington, D.C.

Welcome to Washington, D.C.

The Science Communication Division of The George Washington University Medical Center has been selected by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to coordinate the logistic support and the social and cultural activities for your meeting.

A Conference Coordination Office is located in the Holiday Inn, Bethesda, and will update daily schedules, receive and deliver messages, and organize slides for presentations. An audio-visual specialist will arrange your slides into carousels that fit the projectors at the conference site. Please bring your slides to the Conference Coordination Office or the Information Desk the day before they are to be used. Each set of slides will be carefully labeled and returned to you after your presentation. The Information Desk will be open at each conference session for your convenience. Typewriters and a copy machine will be available to you.

Transportation will be provided to all conference sessions from the Holiday Inn, Bethesda at 8:30 AM. The schedule of meetings and other activities is very full, therefore it is important to be on time for all departures. If you are unable to attend any activity which you have reserved, please notify the Conference Office or the Information Desk.

Your name tag identifies you as a member of the conference, and ensures your admission to all conference sessions and activities. If you should misplace your name tag, replacements can be obtained at the Information Desk.

Attached is a schedule of evening and weekend activities. If you would like to attend any of the events, please see Linda Pleasant at the Information Desk.
